

Openings

The Amy Lau Design Gallery settles in at the New York Design Center

Photo: Jose Manuel Alorda

The Amy Lau Design Gallery is now open at the New York Design Center.

Photo: Jose Manuel Alorda

The gallery features a range of collectible design and artisan works.

Photo: Natalie Osmond

The showroom is located on the eighth floor of the NYDC.

Photo: Natalie Osmond

The gallery will host an opening celebration on September 19.

AD100 interior designer Amy Lau has been creating warm, art-filled interiors since 2001, and now that luxe yet charismatic aesthetic is on full display in her newly opened gallery at the New York Design Center. Located on the eighth floor at 200 Lex, the Amy Lau Design Gallery hosts an assemblage of ceramic, glass, and metal works alongside textiles and furniture, all of which capture Lau's penchant for deftly melding vintage and artisan finds. Particular favorites include Fritz Nagel and César Stoffi's elaborate modular candelabra from the 1970s, as well as a shimmering, contemporary Christopher Prinz side table. Stop by for the gallery's grand opening celebration on Thursday, September 19, from 3:45 p.m. to 5:45 p.m.